BOOTH TARKINGTON

Of all the photographs of this distinguished man, we have never seen one that was not thoughtful, stern, in some cases even severe. In contrast to his pictures, his friends say he is one of the most genial of men, with a wonderful smile that is more habitual than any other expression.

His writings exhibit fine thought, but certainly they are never gloomy; indeed they abound in the choicest humor. The greatest comedians seldom smile when at work, and Tarkington's pictured poses convey the impression that being funny is a serious business.

Every story he writes is different from every other story, and there are more facets to his genius than to a diamond. Twice since 1919 he has won the Pulitzer prize for the best novel of the year. Indiana, famous for celebrities, proclaims him her favorite son.

The most delightful Christmas story that has come out in years is his "Beasley's Christmas Party" which will be printed serially in

The Holiday Spirit Caught and Held Before Your Eyes

Beasley's Christmas Party

BY BOOTH TARKINGTON

Do you know this wonder man, Tarkington? Have you seen him take the dreams, imaginings and humorous errors of childhood and weave them into the most glowing realities? Have you seen him expressing the heart, mind and inclinations of youth? Have you followed him through his realistic yet very captivating depictions of politics, business and social life and then gone with him into the realm of pure romance and fancy? If so, you have viewed life by a master painter and have walked in paths of enchantment that are outside of this world.

If you would be charmed as never before by the embodiment of the spirit of our greatest festive holiday, read "Beasley's Christmas Party" which will run for a few weeks as a serial in

THE TIMES, beginning next week.
